

What expatriates bring

China's millennials abroad

Around the world, there are over 9.5 million Chinese expatriates. Many are entrepreneurs and professionals in host countries, and have created an occupational niche in transnational companies bringing linguistic skills and cultural knowledge.

Skilled* Chinese expatriates in OECD countries

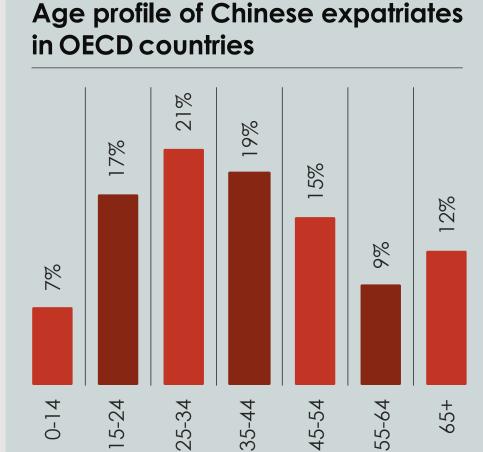

The Chinese expatriate

Low = Primary education and below

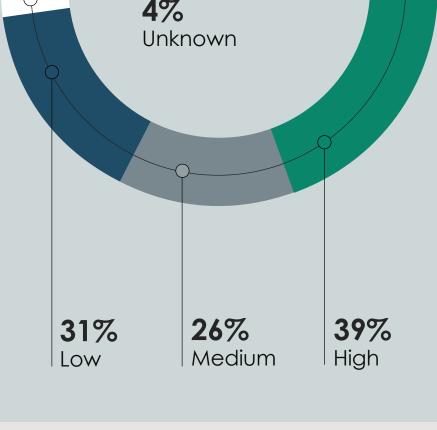

A young and highly educated expatriate population in OECD countries alleviates the problem of an ageing population and a skills gap in developed countries, particularly in Japan and Europe.

Skill levels of Chinese expatriates

4% Unknown

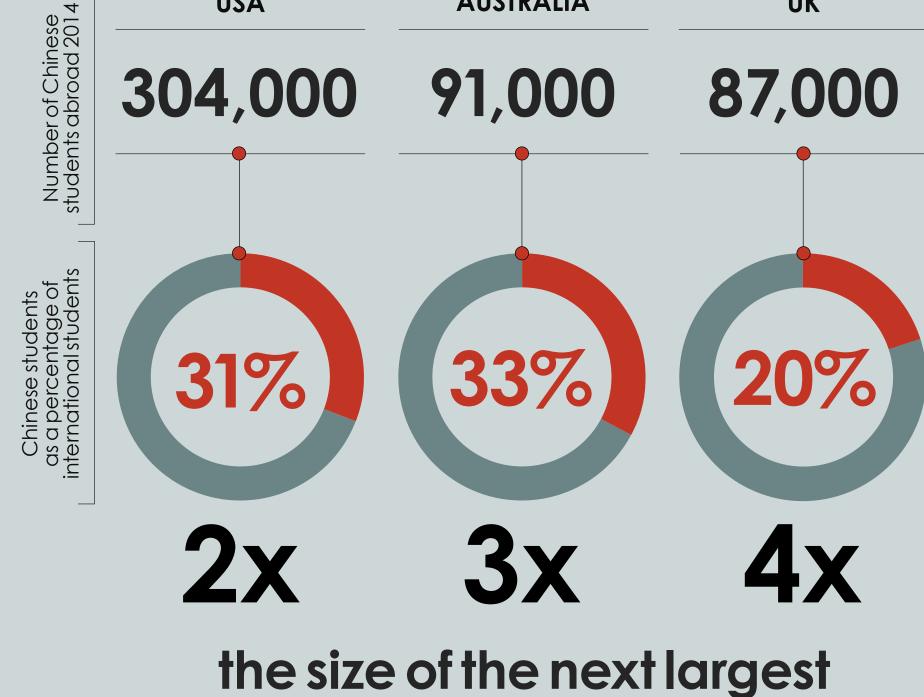

in OECD countries

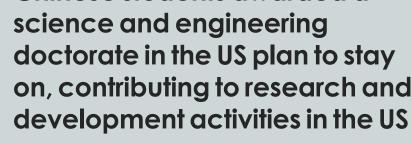

education USA

An international

There are over half a million Chinese students abroad, with a majority in the USA, UK and Australia seeking an English-language education. They are mostly self-financed and additionally contribute to the economy through the consumption of local goods and services over the duration of study. AUSTRALIA UK

international cohort

Chinese students awarded a

Singapore

The transnational expatriate

The new wave of Chinese expatriates has bases both in China and the host country. Chinese migrants leverage their transnational networks to contribute to growing trade and investment links.

Chinese students studying

In Europe, Chinese expatriates have Lee Kuan Yew, established businesses which rely former Prime on goods and networks in China Minister of Singapore

2011

in Japan obtain official employment status

Today's Chinese immigrants are essential for "enhancing business linkages with China" and "will increase our population and talent pool"

Primary activity in UK, France, Portugal, Poland, Austria Importing fabric from China for textile manufacturing

Chinese food

Trade in goods made in China for the European market

Primary activity in UK, Italy, Portugal

Primary activity in Italy, France

Catering and restaurants serving

Chinese expatriates in the United States:

% of all

Chinese

% of all

